

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A receiving layer formed of a thermoplastic resin is softened by applying heat. By using a solvent containing conductive particles, an interconnect layer is formed on the receiving layer which is softened by the application of heat. The conductive particles are bonded together by heating the interconnect layer.